So proud of these young Kings! It's heartwarming to see images like this. Don't forget that educations were once a privilege that Black people didn't have. Our grandparents were fighting to have the chance to study. Don't waste this opportunity. It's never too late for the education.

Don't let me see another post about "Kim Kardashian Boxer Braids" it's called CORN ROWS and it's nothing new... Why when we have em, people call us ghetto but when Kim Kardashian and her sisters wear it, all of a sudden it's a new fashion craze? 🖐️🖐️🖐️ I'm not here for it!

We don't have any other choice this time but boycott the election.
This time we choose between two racists. No one represents Black people.
Don't go to vote. Only this way we can change the way of things.

Ad Text I pity anyone who has to deal with neighbors in an apartment building. Especially when you have to deal with the complaining and passive-aggressive types. Oh, and let's not forget gentrifiers. Or, as I like to call them, "white migrators." Apparently, instead of knocking on a neighbor's door, people take the easy and passive-aggressive way out and just leave notes instead. But one man wasn't having it.

Ad Text White is not right! Why do you think that Santa is white?

Nobody knows the color of his skin, nobody has ever seen him, but white supremacists go crazy if they see a black Santa.

That's always making me laugh.

I would advice white racists to love the snow for its whiteness and to hate the coil for its blackness.

No matter that the snow is killing you and the coil gives you the heat to survive.

Ad Text COLIN KAEPERNICK DONATED TO BLACK YOUTH PROJECT 100

Of course, many of you will scoff at comparing 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick to Martin Luther King Jr., who also demanded better from America in 1966. But after all, Kaepernick is a great athlete who not just sat out the national anthem in protest, but also gave back to the community by donating to the Black Youth Project 100.

Kaepernick donated to the Chicago chapter of the organization toward "Chapter-specific ideas and endeavors centered on advancing Agenda to Build Black Futures" which is dedicated to creating justice and freedom for all Black people in order to improve the lives of black people in the United States of America.

"I'll continue to look at other communities in Chicago, as well, as far as what are ways I can help and what are ways I can try to help empower those communities," he said.

When someone strives to uplift the negativity surrounding black people, there is always someone who will distort the positivity. But we don't really care about haters.
Good job, Colin.

Ad Text When people haven't got clean water and it becomes something "funny" for another group of people simply because they are not affected, makes me sick in the stomach.

This photo of Ohio State fans mocking Flint water crisis with sign isn't at all funny in any way and they should be ashamed of themselves.

I know it might sound 'racist,' but these white people are heartless!

Ad Text "Everyone should #buyblack this holiday season in an effort to support the businesses that are the backbone of our neighborhoods and communities. Often times, we overlook our own businesses to purchase products and services from businesses outside of our communities. Many of us have heard the disturbing statistic about a dollar circulating within the black community for only 6 hours compared to approximately 2-4 weeks in white, Jewish, and Asian communities. If we don't support our entrepreneurs, how can we expect others to support our amazing businesses? We must continue to educate and change the mindset of consumers so "buying black" becomes the norm amongst our people and not only an encouragement during the holiday season," said Lonzell Fogle and Breyon Williams, founders of My Suited Life.

Ad Text Meet Joseph Wicks, the man whose biggest dream is to save old house in downtown Charleston.

Joseph, a retired Pittsburgh firefighter, is moving an old house on Woolfe Street that's being displaced by development says he's doing it to make a statement.

"It was something that I really wanted to go into because it was something that's not done here by black folk," said Joseph Wicks, who now owns the house at 33 Woolfe St. "None of the historic revitalization is ever targeted toward black folk."

Wicks says he has seen Blacks moved out of downtown neighborhoods because the development of the tourism in this area caused the increasing of home prices and made taxes unaffordable for most.

The reason why Wicks bought this house is that it was built in 1840 and it can't be torn down!

I'm so proud of this man! He is making a real movement! Actions like this can protect our history!

Ad Text Before he became a lawyer and prolific supporter of prisoner rights, Daniel Manville spent three years and four months in the slammer for manslaughter. Manville continued to study while incarcerated and eventually earned two college degrees during his sentence. He became enamored with the legal profession and went to law school right after his parole. He finally passed the bar exams in Michigan and Washington, DC after waiting many years to be approved by the respective boards. Afterwards, Manville worked tirelessly to improve the prison system and represented various inmates and prison guards in civil cases. Nowadays, Manville teaches law at Michigan State University, where he hopes the insights he shares with students inspire them to someday help improve the system as well.

Ad Text Prior to cooking delicious five-star cuisine, celebrity chef Jeff Henderson cooked something else entirely dangerous—cocaine. As a teenager, Henderson manufactured and sold drugs in his native home in Los Angeles. By 19, he was already earning US $35,000 per week. Henderson was later apprehended and imprisoned for 10 years after one of his men was caught carrying a big shipment. It was in prison that he discovered his natural flair for cooking, while he was on kitchen duty. He was released early for good behavior and soon started working for some of LA's top restaurants before venturing into Las Vegas. After experiencing many rejections due to his felonious past, Henderson finally managed to land a job at Caesar's Palace. It was only a matter of time before he finally started getting recognition and awards, including best Las Vegas Chef in 2001. All the fame and success hasn't gotten to Henderson's head though and he has continued to share his experiences with at-risk youth to show what they can achieve in life with the right choices.

Ad Text Actor and comedian Ricky Harris died of a heart attack on Monday, his manager, Cindy Ambers, confirmed in an emailed statement. A cause of death has yet to be released.

Harris was well-known for his role as Malvo in the Chris Rock series "Everybody Hates Chris," as well as for his two-year stint on "Moesha." He most recently appeared on FX's "The People v. O.J. Simpson: American Crime Story."

On the big screen, Harris scored a part in 1993's "Poetic Justice" with Janet Jackson and Tupac Shakur, starred alongside Robert De Niro in 1995's "Heat," and recently appeared in 2015's "Dope." Harris also collaborated with his childhood friend Snoop Dogg and rappers Ice Cube and Dr. Dre on some of their albums.

May his beautiful soul R.I.P!
